NOTE.—The companion melody should be freely used whenever the songs are being sung without accompaniment. As its name—counter-melody—implies, it makes counter-point in the sense of the word. Both parts are to be thought of as melodies in themselves, and can well be practised separately. But they should conspire together, in every case, to make a complete and satisfying duet without accompaniment, whether in class work, or for solo voices among companions out for a walk. At the same time it should be noted that the counter-melody is also compatible with the full accompaniment.

"Does gennyf ddim anrhegion,
Na jewels drud i'w danfon
I ddwyn i'ch cof yr hwn a'ch câr,
Ond pâr o fenyg gwynion."

3.
Yr adar mân, fe aethant,
I'w siwrnai bell hedasant,
Ac yno ar gyfer gwely Gwen
Hwy ar y pren ganasant.

4.
Dywedai Gwen, lliw'r ewyn,
"Och fi, pa beth yw'r deryn
Sydd yma'n tiwnio'n awr mor braf
A minnau'n glaf ar derfyn?"

5.
"Cenhadon ym, gwnewch goelio,
Oddi wrth y mwyn a'ch caro,
Gael iddo wybod ffordd yr ych
Ai mendio'n wych ai peidio?"

6.
"O dwedwch wrtho'n dawel
Mai byr fydd hyd fy hoedel,
Cyn diwedd hyn o haf, yn brudd
A'n gymysg bridd a grafel."

7.
Yr adar ddaeth yn ebrwydd
Gan ddwyn i'r mab y newydd
Y byddai'i gariad, hyn sydd wir,
Mewn bedd cyn hir o'i herwydd.

8.
"Wel, os yw hi'r fun dawel
Am fynd i bridd a grafel,
Caiff gennyf gamrig punt o bris,
I roi iddi gryso ffarwel."

9.
"Mi fynnaf ganu'r feiol
A'r delyn yn y canol,
A phob rhyw alar trwm ar glych
Pan el bun wych yn farwol?"

10.
"Ac yno byddaf finnau
Yn wylo'r heilltton ddaugrau
Ar ôl y feinir fwyna 'rioed
A roes ei throed ar lwybrau."

2.
"I dwell beside the river,
Where slender rushes quiver;
Nought else have I my love to show
But snow-white gloves to give her."

3.
Their troth to him they plighted
And flew until they sighted
The cottage where his Gwen lay ill,
And on the sill alighted.

4.
Said Gwen, who had awoken,
To them that brought the token,
"What are you, birds that sing with glee
To me whose heart is broken?"

5.
"We've winged it, greatly daring,
From him whose heart is caring
Both day and night with love so true
To find how you are faring."

6.
"O tell this to my lover,—
I shall be under cover
Of soil and sand, to sigh no more,
Before the summer's over."

7.
The birds again did hover
And brought unto the lover
The news that Gwen, white as the moon,
Would soon be 'neath the clover.

8.
"Well," said he, all a-quiver,
The dweller by the river,
"If Gwen's to die, I swear aloud,
A cambric shroud I'll give her."

9.
"With hands by sorrow shaken
I will the harp awaken,
And sing sad songs with bated breath,
When she by Death is taken."

10.
"And when she lies a-sleeping,
Then you will find me weeping
For her who will, though we may part,
Still have my heart in keeping."

Then let us also join our strains
 With one accord,
 And sing the name of Him who reigns,
 By all adored.
 But never with the lip alone
 Shall our most perfect praise be done;
 To follow Him in all His ways,
 That is our praise.
 Let words of cheer be all we speak,
 To help at need the poor and weak,
 And let us tread, till anger cease,
 The paths of Peace.

Er mwyn cysgodi rhag y storm,

And through that night, when its complaint
Had died in silent sleep,
I heard, beyond the distant dunes,
The moaning of the deep.
All night the caged Ocean told
Its sorrow to the stars,
And beat its ruffled breast against
The grey and yellow bars.

For the dear familiar nesting;
Love that gave it could not save it
When the tempests beat.

Tore it sadly, scattered madly:
Said the swallow - "Twee, twee, tweet!"

Stay with us and make your home here;
Let me tend you and befriend you,
